2 MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

3 INTRODUCTION & SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

4 Mason Group has failed to carry its burden to demonstrate that documents identified on 5 the log are protected by attorney-client privilege or work production doctrine in several respects:

6 First, Mason Group asserts that its communications to and from third-parties such as 7 Wayne Hansen’s friend and “business partner,” a travel agent, and a United States District Court, 8 constitute “attorney work product.” Those assertions are clearly frivolous, and stretch the work 9 product doctrine well past its breaking point.

10 Second, Mason Group’s descriptions of allegedly privileged documents remain 11 inadequate; they do not allow for a reasonable assessment of the validity of the privilege 12 assertion. For the most part, they are comprised of only boilerplate language. Further, many 13 documents over which the “attorney-client privilege” is specifically claimed are not described 14 with any language, generic or otherwise, suggestive of the provision of legal advice between 15 attorney and client. Indeed, it seems doubtful that any of Mason Group’s documents are entitled 16 to that privilege. In any event, we should not be relegated to guessing. In sum, Mason Group 17 was given multiple bites at the apple to articulate an adequate basis for its claimed privileges. It 18 has failed to meet that burden.

19 Third, Mason Group claims work product over a litany of documents apparently 20 downloaded from public sources, none of which are claimed to contain any indicia of potential 21 work product, such as handwritten notes. These documents do not merit any protection.

22 Finally, the Ecuadorian Plaintiffs have more than a “substantial need” for at least some of 23 the documents identified on the privilege log, even if they were protectable work product. This is 24 particularly true of Mason Group’s communications with Charles “Sandy” Harris—Wayne 25 Hansen’s friend, purported “business partner,” and the owner of the environmental remediation 26 company (CIASA), which Messrs. Borja and Hansen falsely claimed to be representatives of as a 27 means of gaining access to the Ecuadorian judge whom they attempted to entrap on film. While 28

1 Chevron has embraced one of its judicial entrapment operatives, Mr. Borja, the company has 2 disavowed any relationship with his accomplice, Mr. Hansen, obviously wishing to keep some 3 distance between itself and the convicted drug-trafficker and inveterate scam artist who helped 4 eliminate a judge perceived as hostile to Chevron's interests. These communications to and from 5 Charles Harris will likely shed light on the true nature of the relationship between Hansen and 6 Chevron, including Chevron's knowledge of, or involvement in, Mr. Hansen's apparent abrupt 7 departure from the United States in or around November 2010.

8 BACKGROUND

9 On July 5, 2011, the Court ordered Mason Group to submit a privilege log to the 10 Ecuadorian Plaintiffs by July 15. (Dkt. 69.) Mason Group did in fact submit a log on July 15, but 11 it does not appear to have been prepared in good faith. (See Dkt. 85 at 8-24.) Virtually all 12 documents were described in meaningless fashion, such as: Email re greetings, Email re
13 documents, Email re phone call, and Email re contact. (See id.) Among other problems, Mason 14 Group did not identify the affiliations of any persons identified on the log as document "authors" 15 or email "recipients," or their relationship to the party asserting privilege. (See id.) 16 Compounding this apparent gamesmanship, Mason Group asserted privilege over a number of 17 documents purportedly on behalf of Chevron, notwithstanding the fact that both Chevron and 18 Mason Group suggested in their briefing that any claim of privilege belonged to Diego Borja.²

19 The Ecuadorian Plaintiffs requested a prompt meet-and-confer in light of Chevron's 20 ongoing efforts to nullify the judgment against it in Ecuador based on the alleged judicial 21 misconduct exposed via the entrapment scheme carried out by Diego Borja and Wayne Hansen.
22 (Dkt. 85 at 26-28.) Four days later, Mason Group responded that it would not "'cure' - or even

24
25 ² See, e.g., Dkt. 72 at 24 (Chevron arguing only that Borja has not waived his privilege); Dkt. 74. at 14, n.3
26 (Mason Group asserting only that counsel for Mr. Borja instructed it to assert privilege). The Ecuadorian Plaintiffs 27 relied on that assertion and did not address any claim of privilege by Chevron in their own briefing—because there 28 was none. Indeed, the Ecuadorian Plaintiffs expressly noted in their reply brief that Chevron seemed only to be advocating (albeit improperly) Mr. Borja's privilege. (Dkt. 79 at 9, n.5.) Chevron should not be permitted to blindsides the Ecuadorian Plaintiffs with this belated assertion of privilege. Chevron has waived the right to assert privilege over any of the Mason Group's documents.

1 discuss” the privilege log unless the Court granted the § 1782 application, notwithstanding the 2 Court’s July 15 Order. (See Dkt. 85 at 30-31 (emphasis added).)

3 The Court granted the Ecuadorian Plaintiffs’ § 1782 Application on August 5. (Dkt. 87.)
4 Following an August 8 conference during which the various deficiencies were discussed, on 5 August 10, Mason Group submitted a revised privilege log. It is apparent from the revised log 6 that Mason Group purported to address the Ecuadorian Plaintiffs’ complaints about minimalist 7 document descriptions by replacing those descriptions with boilerplate language sounding of 8 privilege. On August 23, Mason Group sent the Ecuadorian Plaintiffs a disk containing their 9 document production, as well as another revised privilege log, which appears to be much the 10 same as the August 10 privilege log but for its identification of some additional documents that 11 Mason Group had not previously logged. That August 23 privilege log is the subject of this 12 motion. (See Declaration of James E. Tyrrell, Jr., dated August 31, 2011, at Ex. A.)³

13 As for the document production, the disk contained just two files: one pdf file containing 14 what appeared to be several documents (not in native electronic format) lumped together, and a 15 separate, single email.⁴ (Tyrrell Decl. ¶ 2).⁵ The production was comprised of: (1) the publicly 16 available transcripts of the surreptitiously-videotaped conversations between Messrs. Borja and 17 Hansen, the Ecuadorian judge, and other persons; (2) three emails communications between 18 Diego Borja and others, all of which appear to have been previously produced in the Borja § 1782
19 proceedings; (3) the résumés of Diego Borja and his wife, which were also produced in the Borja 20 § 1782 proceeding; (4) four grainy photographs, which, apparently, are merely stills from the 21 publicly available videotapes of the entrapment operation; and (5) an undated Chevron report
22 about the Lago Agrio Litigation. (Tyrrell Decl. ¶ 3.)

23 * * *

24 _____
25 ³ Hereinafter, unless otherwise noted, all exhibits referenced in this Memorandum are appended to the Tyrrell Declaration.

26 ⁴ The Ecuadorian Plaintiffs continue to meet and confer with Mason Group on this limited issue and hope to resolve this matter without the intervention of this Court.

27 ⁵ The scant production stands in sharp contrast to what has been withheld; the privilege log contains over 160 entries consisting of approximately 700 pages. (See Ex. A.)

1 As this Court has observed: “Chevron’s allegations of judicial bribery in Ecuador are 2 monumental. . . Hansen is at the very center of those allegations. . . . [and] Applicants have 3 demonstrated that the Mason Investigative Group might be able to shed at least some light on 4 Hansen’s story.” (Dkt. 87 at 19-20.) The Mason Group’s scant production and “liberal,” to put it 5 mildly, assertion of privilege over what are obviously the truly informative documents—i.e., 6 communications with Wayne Hansen’s friend and “business partner” —suggest that Chevron and 7 Borja will do everything in their power to assure that no light is ever shed on the Wayne Hansen
8 story. In this global environmental and human rights litigation, in which the Ecuadorian 9 Plaintiffs’ litigation files have been rendered an open book while Chevron’s side of the story has 10 largely gone untested to date, that would be an inequitable result, indeed.

11 ARGUMENT

12 I. MASON GROUP’S PRIVILEGE LOG IMPROPERLY LOGS 13 COMMUNICATIONS AND EXCHANGES WITH THIRD PARTIES THAT 14 CANNOT BE PRIVILEGED

15 Mason Group has improperly withheld documents in the possession of third parties which 16 are not protectable by the attorney work product doctrine. For example, Mason group claims 17 attorney work product over communications with Wayne Hansen’s friend and business partner, 18 and Wayne Hansen’s attorney, even though the parties have already conceded and this Court 19 already found that communications with Wayne Hansen himself are subject to neither privilege 20 nor work product protection. (See Dkt. 87 at 7 n.9 (citing Jul. 5, 2011 Hr’g Tr. at 69:8-13).)
21 Other entries on the log have no description at all as to the third party author and recipient that 22 would enable the reader even to guess why any privilege is being asserted. (See, e.g., Ex. A, at 20 23 (Appendix to the Mason Group log) (providing no explanation of relationship to Mason Group of 24 certain identified persons such as Ellen Thatcher, Pierre Merkl, and Mary McNamara to support 25 privilege and immunity assertions).) And Mason Group even claims that a letter communication 26 with the Clerk’s Office of the United States District Court is somehow privileged. (See Ex. A, at 27 MASON00376-00378.)
28

1 The voluntary exchange of information with third parties waives any claim of privilege or 2 work-product protection. See Griffith v. Davis, 161 F.R.D. 687, 699-700 (C.D. Cal. 1995)
3 (“Waiver is found where the disclosure substantially increases the opportunity for potential 4 adversaries to obtain the information.”); Regents of the Univ. of Cal. v. Micro Therapeutics Inc., 5 No. C 03-05669 JW, 2007 WL 1670120, *3 (N.D. Cal. Jun. 6, 2007) (noting waiver is “general
6 rule” when attorney work product is disclosed to third parties”); Great Am. Assur. Co. v. Liberty 7 Surplus Ins. Corp., 669 F. Supp. 2d 1084, 1092 (N.D. Cal. 2009) (finding waiver due to 8 intentional production to third party). When otherwise protectable information is disseminated to 9 a third party, “the attorney cannot reasonably expect to limit the future use of the otherwise
10 protected material.” Griffith, 161 F.R.D. at 699-700 (citation and internal quotation marks 11 omitted) (emphasis added).

12 The Mason Group clearly cannot meet its burden in showing that third-party disclosures 13 can be considered work product. See United States v. Mass. Inst. Of Tech., 129 F.3d 681, 686 14 (1st Cir. 1997) (“Where privilege is claimed and the opponent alleges a specific disclosure, the 15 burden of proof is on the claimant to show nondisclosure wherever that is material to the 16 disposition of the claim.”).

17 Charles “Sandy” Harris. There are four entries on the Mason Group’s privilege log 18 involving communications with Charles “Sandy” Harris. (See Ex. A at MASON00893-00895, 19 MASON00896-00897, MASON00898-00899, and MASON00926-00927.) Mason Group cannot 20 claim attorney work product immunity over the four emails on which Harris was either the sender 21 or recipient, no less a communication that Mason Group once described, in an earlier iteration of 22 its privilege log, as “email re greetings.”⁶ (Dkt. 85 at 24 (MASON00926-27)). Harris does not 23 work for the Mason Group or Borja, nor can he be regarded as an agent of their counsel. He is 24

25 ⁶ When the Ecuadorian Plaintiffs challenged the Mason Group that an “email re greetings” could not 26 possibly be considered attorney work product, rather than produce the document, Mason Group made their subject 27 matter description of this communication less descriptive, apparently in an effort to conceal from this Court the 28 document’s non-privileged nature. (Compare descriptions for MASON00926-00927 (Dkt. 85, at 24 (“Email re greetings”) to Ex. A at 19 (“Email correspondence reflecting investigator’s strategy related to investigation in anticipation of litigation”).)

1 the founder and owner of Construcción e Ingeniería Ambiental, SA de CV (“CIASA”), a 2 company located and incorporated in Mexico. (See Ex. B.) The relevance of Harris and CIASA 3 to the underlying litigation is clear: CIASA is the water treatment company that Borja and 4 Hansen purported to represent in their meetings with the judge in Ecuador. (Ex. F.)

5 Wayne Hansen was clear about his willingness to turn on Chevron out of frustration at the 6 fact that Chevron had not offered him the “deal” that the “oil co.” gave to Borja. (Dkt. 4, Ex. 7.)
7 Moreover, Hansen’s former partner (Borja) apparently stabbed him in the back. See No. 10-mc-8 80225, Dkt. 68-4, Ex. 36, at 6 (Borja in recorded conversation discussing Hansen and noting “We 9 knew that from the get go. . . . Collateral damage. . . . He’s disreputable.”). To suggest that 10 Hansen’s friend and “business partner”⁷ could somehow be considered a trusted confidante of the 11 Chevron-Borja camp, such that one would reasonably expect Harris to keep communications with 12 the Mason Group a secret is beyond the pale.⁸

13 It cannot be there was any expectation on the part of Eric Mason that when he 14 communicated with Harris, Harris would “limit the future use of the otherwise protected 15 material.” Griffith, 161 F.R.D. at 699-700. The Mason Group has not claimed privilege over its 16 communications with Wayne Hansen (also addressed to Charles Harris). (See Ex. C.) By logical 17 extension, communications with Hansen’s friend and “business partner” during the course of the 18 same investigation should not protected by work product, absent some particularized showing –

19 ⁷ Borja has already conceded that Hansen owned a financial interest in Harris’ CIASA. (Ex. F.)

20 ⁸ Notwithstanding the fact that Mason Group claims “attorney work product” over every document on the 21 log as to which any claim of work product is made, as this Court has recognized with respect to similar documents 22 disclosed in connection with the Borja § 1782 proceedings, if any of these documents are protected work product at 23 all, they are, at best, ordinary work product. (Dkt. 87, at 7.) As ordinary work product, these materials will be 24 discoverable if a party has “substantial need for the materials to prepare its case and cannot, without undue hardship, 25 obtain their substantial equivalent by other means.” Castaneda v. Burger King Corp., 259 F.R.D. 194, 196-97 (N.D.
26 Cal. 2009); see also Fed. R. Civ. Proc. P. 26(b)(3). That the Ecuadorian Plaintiffs have a substantial need for Mason 27 Group’s communications with Charles Harris, a friend and purported “business partner” of Wayne Hansen, is an 28 understatement. As noted above, Hansen and Borja claimed that they worked for CIASA, the Mexican remediation company owned by Charles Harris, as the pretext to gaining access to the Ecuadorian Judge to execute the secretlyvideotaped entrapment scheme. Moreover, Charles Harris is copied on the critical, December 2010 email from Wayne Hansen to Eric Mason, in which Hansen states that he is in Peru and invites Mason to join him. (See Dkt. 4, Ex. 9.) Of all the documents on Mason Group’s privilege log that may shed light on (1) the nature of Chevron’s relationship with Hansen, and (2) the circumstances surrounding his apparent departure from the United States to Peru, the correspondence to and from Mr. Harris is most likely to do so. There is no viable substitute for the exchange between Mason Group and Charles Harris embodied in these emails.

1 which should now be considered waived was not provided at the time Mason Group's privilege 2 log was served. Communications with Harris should be compelled.

3 Mary McNamara. Communications with Mary McNamara should also be ordered 4 produced. Upon information and belief, McNamara was the attorney designated by Chevron to 5 represent Wayne Hansen – a legal representation that may well have never culminated. (Tyrrell 6 Decl., ¶ 5.) The Mason Group claims privilege over two entries in which McNamara is the author 7 or recipient of a communication, though the privilege log's appendix fails to disclose in any way 8 her relationship to Borja and Mason Group. (See Ex. A. at MASON00887-00889.) Instead, the 9 Mason Group log merely discloses that McNamara is an attorney at Swanson & McNamara LLP,⁹ 10 and does not describe, in any way, her relationship (if any) to the Mason Group or Borja, 11 rendering the log deficient in the first instance. To the extent that the parties have already 12 conceded that communications with Hansen cannot be considered work product, communications 13 in the possession, custody, or control of Hansen should also be ordered produced. See, e.g., 14 RESTATEMENT (THIRD) OF AGENCY § 8.11 (2006); see also Evvtex Co. v. Hartley Cooper Assocs.
15 Ltd., 102 F.3d 1327, 1332 (2d Cir. 1996) (holding agent has duty to provide principal with 16 information relevant to affairs entrusted to him).

17 United States District Court. Mason Group audaciously has withheld, and claims 18 attorney work product over, three letters to United States district courts. (See MASON00374-75, 19 MASON00376, and MASON00377-78). Tellingly, Mason Group did not include the word 20 “draft” in its revised privilege log description for these documents and during the meet-and-21 confer session, when specifically asked whether the documents were drafts, counsel for Mason 22 Group demurred. (Tyrrell Decl., ¶ 6.).

23 Mason Group cannot support an argument that letters sent to a United States District 24 Court are privileged or subject to any immunity. There cannot be any reasonable expectation that 25 any documents sent to a Federal courthouse will not be made public. See, e.g., Seattle Times Co.

26 _____
27 ⁹ Swanson & McNamara LLP – now Swanson, McNamara & Haller LLP – bills itself as a “firm 28 specializing in criminal defense.” (See Ex. D.)

1 v. U.S. District Court, 845 F.2d 1513, 1516 (9th Cir. 1988) (noting public access to judicial 2 proceedings is crucial to public confidence in judiciary). It is outrageous for Mason Group to 3 claim that an unsolicited letter sent to United States District Court would be subject to work
4 product protection.¹⁰

5 Travel agents. Mason Group has claimed privilege over communications with its travel 6 agents. (See, e.g., See, e.g., Ex. A. at MASON00900-00902 (“Email correspondence between 7 counsel and travel agent reflecting investigative strategy in anticipation of litigation”), 8 MASON00904-906 (“Documents related to travel reflecting investigative strategy in anticipation
9 of litigation”); See, e.g., Dkt. 85 at MASON00474-00476, MASON00892-00893 (emails
10 described as “Email re travel), MASON00478 (“Email re travel safety”), MASON00799 (“Email
11 re travel research”). Communications with travel agents cannot be subject to claims of attorney 12 work product for the purpose of provisioning air plane tickets and hotel reservations.¹¹ As an 13 initial matter, communications with a travel agent for the purpose of booking travel stretches 14 work product immunity well beyond its intended purpose, if they can be claimed work product at 15 all. In related litigation in the Southern District of New York, that Court last week ordered the 16 production of documents related to “travel logistics,” finding that such communications are “non-17 substantive” and “must be produced because they are neither attorney-client communications nor 18 attorney work product.” (Exhibit E, at 2 (emphasis added).) It is doubtful that a communication 19 with a travel agent is prepared “because of” litigation. In re Grand Jury Subpoena (Mark 20 Torf/Torf Environmental Management), 357 F.3d 900, 906 (9th Cir. 2004). Protecting such 21 communications is not in alignment with the principle behind the work product doctrine: to 22

23 ¹⁰ This is particularly true as Chevron has argued elsewhere, and other courts have found, that documents 24 provided to a court appointed expert in Ecuador are not protected by work product. See Chevron Corp. v. E-Tech
25 Int’l., No. 10cv1146-IEG(WMc), 2010 WL 3584520, *6 (S.D. Cal. Sept. 10, 2010) (finding that communications 26 with a court appointed expert lost any confidential privilege status). There is, in short, no reasonable expectation of 27 privacy in documents submitted to a United States Federal Court and Mason Group should be compelled to produce 28 these communications.

¹¹ Surely Mason Group could not claim as immune from discovery a communication with Delta Airlines selecting a seat assignment or a stub for a flight ticket. For the same reasons Mason Group cannot shield invoices, itineraries, and other documents created by or sent to its travel agents.

1 “shelter[] the mental processes of the attorney, providing a privileged area within which he can 2 analyze and prepare his client’s case.” O’Connor v. Boeing N. Am., Inc., 216 F.R.D. 640, 643 3 (C.D. Cal. 2003) (citation omitted).

4 Joe Serrano and Pierre Merkl. Mason Group’s privilege log identifies two 5 “investigators” on its log, Joe Serrano and Pierre Merkl, but fails to disclose their relationship to 6 Borja and Mason Group in order to allow the Ecuadorian Plaintiffs the opportunity to assess 7 work-product claims over these same communications. (See Ex. A, at MASON00770-73, 8 MASON00778-79; MASON00814-22, MASON00825-26, MASON00831-32.) Neither the 9 Mason Group nor Borja produced or logged any retainer or engagement agreement with either 10 Serrano or Merkl, or their investigative services. Mason Group has put forth no evidence 11 indicating that it has any legally protectable relationship with other investigative firms. Work 12 Product privilege only protects communications prepared by the attorney or his agents. United 13 States v. Nobles, 422 U.S. 225, 238–39 (1975).

14 II. THE MASON GROUP’S PRIVILEGE LOG FOR THE MOST PART DOES NOT 15 SUFFICIENTLY ARTICULATE A BASIS FOR THE PRIVILEGES CLAIMED

16 Documents must be described on a privilege log “in a manner that, without revealing 17 information itself privileged or protected, will enable other parties to assess the claim [of 18 privilege].” Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(5) (emphasis added). A party’s “[f]ailure to provide sufficient 19 information may constitute a waiver of the privilege.” Ramirez v. County of L.A., 231 F.R.D. 407, 20 410 (C.D. Cal. 2005). Moreover, “[d]oubts must be resolved against the party asserting the 21 privilege.” United States v. 22.80 Acres of Land, 107 F.R.D. 20, 22 (N.D. Cal. 1985); U.S.
22 Inspection Servs., Inc. v. NL Engineered Solutions LLC, 268 F.R.D. 614, 626 (N.D. Cal. 2010)
23 (same). The Mason Group’s privilege log falls well short of what is required by Rule 26 of the 24 Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and the interpretive authority.

25 A. Mason Group’s Boilerplate Document Descriptions Do Not Permit the 26 Validity of Its Assertion of “Attorney Work Product” to be Evaluated in Any 27 Meaningful Way

28 1. Mason Group’s Document Descriptions are Devoid of Substance

1 In response to the Ecuadorian Plaintiffs’ complaint that the three-word document (e.g., 2 “Email re greetings”) descriptions provided on the Mason Group’s original, July 15 privilege log 3 were inadequate, Mason Group simply added words without adding any substance—and in most 4 cases, removing what little substance was already there.¹² Mason group’s descriptions are “too 5 cryptic to the point of obfuscation.”¹³ Conclusory descriptions comprised of hollow, strung-6 together buzz-phrases invoking notions of work product protection do not suffice.¹⁴ The 7 substitution of conclusory, boilerplate language in lieu of substance is alone fatal to the claims of 8 work product protection asserted here.

9 2. Mason Group’s Privilege Log Does Not Sufficiently Convey That the 10 Documents Were Prepared in Anticipation of Litigation

11 To qualify for work product protection, a document must be “prepared in anticipation of 12 litigation or for trial.” In re Grand Jury Subpoena (Mark Torf/Torf Environmental Management), 13 357 F.3d 900, 906 (9th Cir. 2004); Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3). A party asserting protection under 14 the work product doctrine must make the requisite showing as to each document identified on its 15 privilege log. See Bible v. Rio Properties, Inc., 246 F.R.D. 614, 620 (C.D. Cal. 2007) (internal 16 citations omitted); Garcia v. City of Centro, 214 F.R.D. 587, 591 (S.D. Cal. 2003).

17 In addition to the lack of any real substantive description, Mason Group’s log does not 18 inform us what litigation it contends the documents were created “in anticipation of.” We are 19 cognizant that in its August 5 Order, the Court took the prudent position that it could not then,

20
 21 ¹² By way of example, Mason Group replaced “Email re Vehicle Registration Report” with “Email 22 correspondence between counsel and investigator related to results of investigation in anticipation of litigation.” (Compare Dkt. 85 with Ex. A, at MASON00462-63.) A document originally described as “Email re travel safety” was changed to “Email correspondence between counsel and investigator reflecting counsel’s instructions and 23 investigative strategy in anticipation of litigation” (Compare Dkt. 85 to Ex. A, MASON00478).

24 ¹³ Natural Resources Defense Council v. Gutierrez, No. C 01-0421 JL, 2008 WL 2468494, at *3 (N.D. Cal.
 Jun. 17, 2008) (ordering party to provide more detail explaining the nature of the document, including document’s subject matter).

25 ¹⁴ See Dominguez v. Schwarzenegger, No. CO0-2306 CW(JL), 2010 WL 3341038, at *4 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 25, 2010) (finding that party’s non-descriptive document summaries gave no indication whether the underlying materials were privileged); Coleman v. Schwarzenegger, Nos. CIV S-90-0520 LKK JFM P, C01-1351 THE, 2008 WL 26 4234239, at *5 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 29, 2008) (holding that privilege log was “too vague and conclusory to permit an adequate assessment of the claim of privilege.”) (emphasis added); see also E.E.O.C., 2002 WL 31947153, at *3 27 (N.D. Cal. 2002).

1 “[b]ased on the Court’s current understanding,” accept the Ecuadorian Plaintiffs’ theory that 2 Borja’s counsel was merely acting as a conduit between Chevron and Mason Group, in sole 3 service of Chevron’s interests vis à vis the Lago Agrio Litigation.¹⁵ (Dkt. 8 at 21.) But owing to 4 Mason Group’s ambiguous privilege log, our understanding on this issue remains frozen. We 5 remain relegated to guessing how the threat of litigation arose and from where, and most 6 importantly, we have no way of assessing if and when the threat of this generically-described 7 litigation may have ended at some point.¹⁶ This total lack of clarity is compounded by the fact 8 that Mason Group neither produced nor logged any retention agreement that might shed light on 9 the scope of what it was retained to do. The burden is unquestionably on Borja (through Mason 10 Group) to prove his entitlement to work product protection with specificity. See, e.g., Kaufman & 11 Broad Monterey Bay v. Travelers Prop. Cas. Co., No. C10-02856, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 59724,

13 “party claiming work-product protection bears the burden of demonstrating that the doctrine 14 applies” and defendant failed to show “by specific evidentiary proof of objective facts, that a 15 reasonable anticipation of litigation existed when the document was produced, and that the 16 document was prepared and used solely to prepare for that litigation, and not to arrive at a (or 17 buttress a tentative) claim decision.”) (internal quotation marks omitted). But by failing to 20 ¹⁵ The Court noted specifically that the Ecuadorian Plaintiffs had failed to articulate why Chevron could not 21 simply have hired the Mason Group directly, if that were the case. We respectfully submit that the reason Chevron 22 would not hire the Mason Group directly is that it wished to keep the appearance of a disconnect between itself and 23 anything involving Wayne Hansen (apparently, a person of considerable disrepute). This is plainly evidenced by 24 Chevron’s many public disavowals of any connection to Hansen, as well as the fact that, much to Mr. Hansen’s 25 chagrin, Chevron immediately cut a “deal” with Mr. Borja in the immediate aftermath of the entrapment operation 26 but apparently was not as eager to bring Mr. Hansen into its camp. (See Dkt. 4, Ex. 7.)

24 ¹⁶ See Clavo v. Zarrabian, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27014, at *7-8 (C.D. Cal. July 9, 2003) (rejecting 25 defendants’ work product claims because that “burden cannot be discharged by mere conclusory or ipse dixit
26 assertions”) (internal citations and quotation marks omitted) (emphasis added); McCaugherty v. Siffermann, 132 27 F.R.D. 234, 245-46 (N.D. Cal. 1990) (rejecting defendants’ assertion of work product doctrine because they failed to 28 sufficiently identify a litigation for which documents were prepared.); TeKnowledge Corp. v. Akamai Techs., Inc.,

1 years now) in any meaningful way—i.e., a way that would allow us to assess the credibility of 2 that assertion—he has impermissibly hoisted the burden on the Ecuadorian Plaintiffs to disprove 3 his claim.

4 B. Mason Group’s Privilege Log Does Not Sufficiently Convey That the 5 Documents Were Prepared in Anticipation of Litigation

6 “Not all communications between attorney and client are privileged.” Clarke v. Am.
7 Commerce Nat’l Bank, 974 F.2d 127, 129 (9th Cir. 1992). The party claiming privilege must 8 demonstrate the satisfaction of a number of discrete elements. Admiral Ins. v. United States Dist.
9 Ct. for Dist. of Ariz., 881 F.2d 1486, 1492 (9th Cir.1989); see also United States v. Richey, 632 10 F.3d 559, 566 (9th Cir. 2011) (“The party asserting the attorney-client privilege has the burden of 11 establishing the relationship and privileged nature of the communication.” Mason Group’s 12 privilege log is particularly deficient in terms of establishing any valid claim of attorney-client 13 privilege, in at least two ways.

14 First, Mason Group asserts attorney-client privilege over every communication with an 15 attorney. Mason Group’s over-application of the privilege is belied by the basic tenet that “[t]he 16 attorney-client privilege protects confidential communications between attorneys and clients, 17 which are made for the purpose of giving legal advice.” United States v. Richey, 632 F.3d 559, 18 566 (9th Cir. 2011) (citing Upjohn Co. v. United States, 449 U.S. 383, 389 (1981)). The 19 California Rules of Evidence provide that a “confidential communication between client and 20 lawyer’ means information transmitted between a client and his or her lawyer in the course of that 21 relationship and in confidence” Cal. Evid.Code § 952. Mason Group cannot, therefore, 22 assert the attorney-client privilege over communications that do not involve the conveyance of 23 legal advice. See United States v. Chen, 99 F.3d 1495, 1501 (9th Cir.1996) (“That a person is a 24 lawyer does not, ipso facto, make all communications with that person privileged. The privilege 25 applies only when legal advice is sought from a professional legal advisor in his capacity as 26 such.”) (citation omitted); Coleman v. Schwarzenegger, Nos. CIV S-90-0520 LKK JFM P, C01-27 1351, 2008 WL 4415324, *4 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 25, 2008) (denying attorney-client protection of 28

1 “documents [that] do not indicate that the communication was made for the purpose of seeking 2 legal advice”).

3 Second, communications sent between two non-lawyers do not qualify for the attorney-4 client privilege. To properly assert the attorney-client privilege the privilege log “must identify 5 the attorney and client involved in the communication.” Aristocrat Technologies Australia Pty
6 Ltd. v. Int’l. Game Technology, No. C 06–03717 RMW (PSG), 2011 WL 1158781, at *3 (N.D.
7 Cal. Mar. 29, 2011) (emphasis added); Coleman, TEH, 2008 WL 4415324, at *4 (opining that a 8 party cannot assert attorney-client privilege over communications that do not involve an 9 attorney). And Mason Group certainly cannot argue that, like perhaps an accountant or other 10 technical consultant, its role was to help facilitate the provision of legal advice between lawyer 11 and client—it was, by its own admission, nothing more than a gatherer of information. Cf. United 12 States v. Richey, 632 F.3d 559, 566 (9th Cir. 2011) (noting that information provided by third 13 parties such as accountants, specifically retained to aid with the provision of legal advice in their 14 professional capacity, may be subject to attorney-client privilege).

15 C. Notwithstanding the Fact That Its Original Descriptions Were Papered Over 16 With Boilerplate Language in Its Revised Log, Mason Group’s Original Log 17 Reveals The True, Unprotected Nature of Certain of the Documents

18 The United States District Court for the Southern District of New York recently held in a 19 related docket, Chevron Corp v. Maria Aguida Salazar, that documents “characterized as ‘non-20 substantive’” in nature, such as “communications about arranging telephone calls, travel logistics, 21 and ‘out-of office’ e-mails” are not protectable work product. No. 11 Civ. 3718 (LAK) (JCF)
22 (S.D.N.Y.) (Dkt. 227, at 2) (emphasis added). Notwithstanding Mason Group’s attempt to dress-23 up the descriptions in its revised privilege log, documents that Mason Group once saw fit to 24 describe as “email re travel,” “email re travel safety,” “email re travel reservations,” and, 25 perhaps most of all, “Email re greetings,” are not entitled to protection. (See Dkt. 85 at 8-24, 26 MASON00474-75, MASON00478, MASON00904-906, and MASON00926-927.) Indeed, that 27 the descriptions “Email re greetings” and “Email correspondence reflecting investigator's 28 strategy related to investigation in anticipation of litigation” have been used to describe the very

1 same document is indicative of bad faith somewhere along the line. (Compare Dkt. 85 with Ex.
2 A, at MASON00926-927.)

3 D. Mason Group’s Assertion of Privilege Over Email Attachments Is Inadequate

4 To properly assert privilege over an attachment to an email, the attachment must qualify 5 on its own for attorney-client privilege and “must be listed as a separate document on the 6 privilege log.” AT&T Corp. v. Microsoft Corp., No. 02-0164 MHP (JL), 2003 WL 21212614, at 7 *4 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 18, 2003) (quoting O’Connor v. Boeing North American, Inc., 185 F.R.D. 272, 8 280 (C.D. Cal. 1999)). Mason Group’s log, at best, merely states within the email description 9 that some document is attached, and worse yet, provides no information regarding the subject 10 matter of the attachment. Consequently, Mason Group has failed to articulate a basis for any 11 privilege assertion over the attachments.¹⁷

12 III. MASON GROUP’S PRIVILEGE LOG ASSERTS CLAIMS OF PRIVILEGE 13 OVER DOCUMENTS THAT INHERENTLY DO NOT QUALIFY FOR ANY 14 PRIVILEGE OR PROTECTION AND SHOULD BE ORDERED PRODUCED

15 Billing invoices. Billing invoices are generally not privileged and surely cannot be 16 summarily protected by either the attorney-client privilege or work product doctrine. United 17 States v. $1,379,879.09 Seized from Bank of Am., 374 Fed. App’x. 709, 711 (9th Cir. 2010) 18 (explaining that “garden-variety” billing records are not protected and may be “redacted only to 19 the extent absolutely necessary to protect information covered by the attorney-client privilege or 20 the work-product doctrine”). Surprisingly, though Mason Group says it is asserting Borja’s 21 privileges and work product, Mason Group specifically withheld (without any redaction) 22 documents that Diego Borja produced in the related 28 U.S.C. § 1782 proceeding pending against 23

24 _____ 25 ¹⁷ (See, e.g., MASON00795-98 (“Email correspondence attaching memorandum prepared by counsel in 26 anticipation of litigation”); MASON00496-676 (“Cover Letter attaching Report of Investigation prepared by 27 investigator for counsel in anticipation of litigation”); MASON00746-62 (“Email correspondence attaching 28 memorandum prepared by counsel in anticipation of litigation”); and MASON00803-04 (“Email correspondence between counsel and investigator attaching photographic evidence related to investigation in anticipation of litigation”).

1 him.¹⁸ (Compare Ex. A, MASON00910-25 (describing withheld document as “Invoices for 2 Services Rendered,” with Dkt. 4, Ex. 14 (collection of Mason Group invoices produced by Borja 3 in § 1782 with redactions).) These documents should be ordered produced.

4 Reports and other public documents. To claim work product protection, the document 5 in question must have been prepared by or for a party. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3). Fundamentally, 6 the work product protection does not shield “discovery materials in an attorney’s possession that 7 were prepared neither by the attorney nor his agents.” United States v. Fort, 472 F.3d 1106, 8 1130 (9th Cir. 2007) (holding that reports in the FBI’s possession but created state and local 9 police forces do not warrant work product protection). Nevertheless, Mason Group continues to 10 claim “Attorney Work Product” immunity over two hundred pages of documents that neither it 11 nor its agents prepared. (Ex. A, at MASON00195-373; MASON00379-403.) Mason Group’s 12 continued instance on seeking immunity from producing these two hundred pages of document is 13 clear abuse of the work product doctrine.¹⁹ Further, Mason Group cannot assert privilege over 14 documents it downloaded from the Internet or other online databases, which do not involve “any 15 creative or analytical input from counsel” so as to merit work product protection. In re

 18 to work product protection). Database reports generated by a third party as a result of a simple 19 name search are no different.²⁰

20 _____
 21 ¹⁸ Mason Group should also produce MASON00890-91. While counsel’s revised, August 23, 2011 22 privilege log describes this document as “[e]mail correspondence between counsel and investigator reflecting 23 counsel’s instructions related to investigation in anticipation of litigation,” Ex. A), an earlier privilege log revealed 24 that this document is an “[e]mail re billing.” (Dkt. 85 at 23.)

²⁰ Mason Group’s privilege log contains online reports printed from databases such as AutoTrack XP, (Ex.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Ecuadorian Plaintiffs request that the Court issue an order compelling Respondent Mason group to immediately produce all documents identified on its privilege log.
